I. REFERENCE MATERIALS

Because it takes time to collect materials and equipment to stock a tent, the Society has assembled a Convenor Kit to help new Convenors begin representing the Society at Scottish Games. The Kit contains the four books on William Wallace (for display and sale purposes only), and many flyers with information on William Wallace. The Kit can be bought at a great Scottish savings (under $100), or can be borrowed until Convenors can build their own collection of materials (see page 16.)

New Convenors should obtain books on the history of Scotland (questions will not always be about the Society), and a biography of Sir William Wallace. You should also purchase "Tartan for Me" and a book containing the Scottish Tartans, because many visitors ask about their name and Clan affiliation. If you can not answer their questions, it is hospitable to point them to the Tartan Information Tent that is present at most Festivals.

II. TENT AND EQUIPMENT

To set up a Wallace tent, you will need some equipment. Although tents, tables and chairs can be rented at most Festivals, it is more economical over the long run to buy them. Used or "Yard Sale" items in good condition work fine. (A Wallace Banner and the Saint Andrews flag are included in the Convenor Kit.)

Everyone usually owns lawn chairs. Card tables, although probably not large enough, work as a temporary measure. Office Max has a plastic 6 foot bi-fold table for about $70. Costco and Staples also have 4' and 6' heavy duty tables ranging from $45 to $60. If you don't have a tent, a nylon tarp is recommended. Tie it down tightly to contend with summer storms and high winds. The 12' X 16' size is most practical. Poles can be made from electrical conduit cut to size to fit your car. Join them with hardwood dowels sanded to fit easily into the upper sections. Purchase nylon cord for attachment to purchased stakes. Aluminum poles available for sale in sporting goods stores often bend and do not withstand wind very well.

Make the poles long enough to give ample clearance at the front of the tent so people won't have to bend to enter. A center ridgepole, higher than the front and rear, affords more comfort for standing. It also prevents water from gathering during rain. Large plastic boxes with tops that seal can be used for tent materials, books, etc. If you don't have plastic boxes, cardboard boxes, painted red or yellow and sealed with exterior varnish will work temporarily. Use anything to keep your books and other materials from getting wet, even plastic garbage bags wrapped around cardboard boxes will work.

If you are participating at a two-day Festival, pack materials in the boxes, place them under the table, and cover the table with a tarp (large enough to extend to the ground all around the table) at the end of first day. Stake the tarp to the ground with tent stakes. This will keep the table from being blown over by wind, and protects the materials from dew and rain.

Clan Wallace Society - Worldwide

III. HOW YOU SHOULD DRESS

It is highly recommended that you have a kilt made before you sponsor a Game. The kilt will last a lifetime. An inexpensive way to clean it is to open it fully, pin it to the clothesline and use the garden hose to wet it thoroughly. The weight of the water pulls the pleats perfectly. If soiled, use waterless hand cleaner (such as GO-JO). Work it into the fabric and rinse well. Professional cleaners will charge $25 to $35 to clean a kilt, but telling them that it is a ladies skirt may save on cost.

IV. PLANNING

One week before you depart for a Celtic Festival or Scottish Games, review your supply of flyers, brochures, and forms to ensure you have enough to hand out to visitors. This will give you time to copy flyers before departing. Stage tent display materials in an open area to make sure you have everything you want to take along. Review items against the Equipment Checklist on page 15, and check them off as you load them into your vehicle. Finally, keep a tally of depleted items at the Games so you can copy them when you return and restock them to be ready for the next Games.

V. SETTING UP

If you are renting equipment from the Games coordinator, all should be set up when you arrive at the Games. All you need to do is arrange your tent display. If you are using your own tent equipment, there are a few things to consider.

If you set up on the morning of the Games day, keep in mind that most Games coordinators will want vehicles off the grounds by 8 to 8:30 a.m., even if the gate does not open to the public until 10 a.m. This means that you must be dressed, have had your breakfast, and get there very early and be set up in order to meet this time requirement. Remember that it will take more time if it's raining.

The good news is that most coordinators will allow you to set up in the afternoon the day prior to the Games, which makes it very convenient. You can set up your tent, flag poles, and unload your tent materials and cover them with a tarp until Games day the next morning. This will allow you ample time on the morning of Games day to have breakfast, clean up, dress, and arrive at the Games before the gates open to the public. When you get there, all you need do is unpack your materials and set up your tent display.

VI. ORGANIZING YOUR TENT

The table should be placed at the front of the tent. On the table should be Society brochures, books and a visitor register. The register can be cheaply made with a binder and copies of the sign-in sheets from page 13 of the Handbook. Have some items to use as paperweights. Painted rocks are fine and are great for holding down papers, or get a little fancy and cover half bricks with Wallace tartan. Do not use the table at the front of the tent for food or drink because that may put you at risk of getting materials soiled. Eat at the rear of the tent. A card table or TV trays serve that purpose well.

Flags are excellent but not a necessity at your first Game. Purchase equipment, books, weapons, and other display articles over a period of time to ease the burden of cost. Flag poles can be made from closet poles or large dowels to cut expense. Tartan flags can be made from one yard of fabric. Sew a side seam to fit over the dowel and secure it with tacks. The American flag (The Maple Leaf or Provincial flag in Canada) is usually displayed. The St. Andrews flag, (included in the Convenor Kit), is available at Scottish-Irish stores or from vendors at Festivals. Although some Clan Societies display the red and yellow Rampant Lion flag, the Scottish Royal Flag, it is not proper etiquette to do so. There are now flags that look similar (Colors are different), and these can be displayed.

Clan badges and signs can be made from wood. They are also nice to carry in the Parade of Tartans. Use your imagination and the possibilities are endless. A word of warning; if the Clan Chief's Coat of Arms is displayed, there must be a sign to indicate that it is his, and not yours. Coats of Arms are personal property and for the exclusive use of the person to whom they belong. In Scotland, it is unlawful to display or wear someone else's Coat of Arms. Only the Clan Badge (shown on the cover of this handbook) may be worn or displayed by Clan members. On occasions when the Chief is present at a Game, you may fly his banner bearing his arms.

VII. HOSPITALITY

Games are friendship activities. If allowed in the state in which Games are held, it's a good idea to have a bottle of scotch and some beer so you can offer refreshment to fellow Clansmen or visitors from other Clans. If a pipe band plays at your tent, it is customary to offer the Drum Major and Pipe Major some scotch or beer. But be discreet. Some Games held on public property (schools and parks) do not allow alcohol, so check local regulations. Don't forget the non-drinkers and have some sodas or iced tea. You can also provide snacks if you desire.

VIII. INTERACTIONS WITH VISITORS

Visitors to your tent will not always be Wallaces. Some will only be curious and want to see your displays. Others will want to know if their surname is Scottish, or to which Clan they belong and which tartan they can wear. Others will want to know about Sir William Wallace, Scottish history in general, or any number of subjects.

First impressions mean a lot when it comes to recruiting new members, and the Clan Wallace Society has a reputation of being helpful. Always greet visitors with enthusiasm and introduce these prospective members to the other folks at your tent. Ask them if you can help them find what they are looking for even if they are from another Clan. If they ask a question that you cannot answer, have them sign the visitor register and put their question in the comments. Tell them you will research the answer and get back to them. None of us are experts on all the subjects about which visitors will ask. You can always contact fellow Convenors or members or the Board of Directors for the answer.

Some visitors to your tent may ask if there is a Clan Wallace Website on the Internet. The official Clan Wallace Society Websites can be found at: <http://www.clanwallace.org>. It contains historical information about William Wallace, the Family of Wallace, the Society, and links to other sites. The Members Page contains a listing of Clan Wallace Society Officers, Convenors, a picture album, the Society Games schedule, and a membership application.

IX. FOLLOW-UP LETTERS AND GAMES REPORTING

It is highly recommended that a follow-up letter (see page 10) be sent promptly after the Games to thank visitors for their interest in the Society and to once again invite them to become a member. Also inform them of any other upcoming Games and Festivals in their region. Since the visitor probably got the tri-fold pamphlet at the Games, don't send them another one with the letter. One out of ten may join, so an additional nine applications would be wasted. Send them instead the one page membership form on page 12. Keep applications on hand at the Games because they are often requested. If they are given to a visitor, make sure a note of it is made on the visitor register and word the follow-up letter accordingly. (The tri-fold pamphlet will be revised to omit the membership section, so the one page membership form will be the form potential new members will use to join the Society.)

Provide a short, newsy article in Word format, with photos in .jpg format, to the Newsletter Editor about the Games at which you convene. This will let the membership know about your convening activities, and let them see you, your helpers, and some of your visitors at your tent. Any Newsletter will provide a sample Games report.

If any visitors are from outside an area where you convene, check to see if there is a Convenor in their area. If so, notify that Convenor about your visitor from their area so they can contact them as an incentive to become a member of the Society.

X. EXPENSES

The Clan Wallace Society does not provide financial aid and you do not receive any direct (material) benefit from setting up a Wallace tent. The Society was formed for the purposes of promoting the Wallace heritage and historical education, and is non-profit and exempt from Federal Income Tax under section 501 (c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code, as granted in June 1966. Some of your expenses may be deducted from your Federal, and from some State, income taxes. Keep records of anything you purchase for use at the Game. The list below contains examples of deductible expenses:

Clan Wallace Society - Worldwide

- Convenor Kit
- Fees charged to set up at the Games
- Clan tent materials (tent, tables, flags, flagpoles, banners, books, posters, Scottish period swords and weapons)

Please consult with your accountant to determine whether expenses are deductible. Convenors can use the sample Scottish Event Data Sheet on page 14 to track Games expenses. You may get a copy of our tax-free status letter from the IRS by contacting the Society President.

XI. LOCAL ACTIVITIES

If you are lucky enough to have a fairly large group of members in your area, you may at some point want to do a local Newsletter. Keeping members informed of upcoming events keeps them interested. Some areas have informal meetings in pubs or homes of members. Some attend Burns Night Dinners, Tartan Balls, Pipe Band Concerts or other activities as a group. The Baltimore St. Andrews Society and the Clan Wallace Society members of that area hold a Memorial Service for Sir William Wallace at his statute in Baltimore each August on the Sunday closest to the day he was put to death. Perhaps your nearest St. Andrews Society could hold such a service at a local church with participation of the members in your area.

One of the primary goals of setting up Wallace tents at a Game is for membership recruitment. If you foster other activities, interest will remain high among current members. An annual picnic could be held at your areas featured Game of the year. You may also want to retain a list of local members so you can contact them for activities, or in the event that you decide to do an area Newsletter.

XII. SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS

Sale of any item not specifically designated as Wallace may be forbidden by Games Associations. Clan Wallace is a non-profit organization and is listed as such with the IRS. If items such as crafts of Wallace tartan, doll kilts of the same are donated, they can be sold to offset the cost of the Games or equipment. Convenors need to check the ruling at each Game. Some are more lenient than others. Most critical is the IRS rulings for non-profit organizations. It must be understood that items sold from Wallace tents are sold by individuals, and not the Society.

XIII. MEMBERSHIP INFORMATION

There are currently two types of memberships in the Clan Wallace Society. LIFE membership is $50.00, U.S. Funds, and COUNCIL membership is $100.00, U.S. Funds. Only COUNCIL Members may run for the Board of Directors and vote in the elections for Directors. Members may upgrade from LIFE to COUNCIL at anytime. Membership cannot be transferred to another person.

Clan Wallace Society - Worldwide

All membership fees and contributions to Clan Wallace Society are tax deductible. The LIFE and COUNCIL memberships are one time fees, and there are no annual dues.
